Georgia's Delegates to the Constitutional Convention of 1787

Joanne Smalley, Professional Researcher

Originally intended to revise the Articles of Confederation, many delegates to the convention wanted to create a new government rather than fix the existing one. The result was the United States Constitution, placing the convention among the most significant events in the history of the U.S. Learn more about the delegates from Georgia and their role in this historic event.

It's free!

12 noon to 1 p.m.

Bring a lunch to eat during the program.
